

The city of Paris

First of all, Paris is a magical place. I had the time of my life living there and there is so much to do and to explore. There is really no campus where you can live so you need to find an apartment on your own. Its quite expensive but not more than any other big european city. Paris is huge so choose to live somewhat close to the school, or at least on the same side so you don't spend all of your time on the subway.

Orientation and Social events

The first week was packed with events for the new international students and that was fun. Later on in the term they don't have as much and most events are promoted in french. Not really inviting if you are international. But Paris has so many fun things so it doesn't really matter that I didn't go to that many school parties. Many international students in the english speaking courses so its easy to get to know people in school.

Courses

You can choose a track that includes a set of courses but then also add elective ones. I choose Luxury brand management which was really investing since its not available at home. The classes are very small, not like the lectures at home, more like high school. You read everything parallel and have all your exams at the same time in the end. Im not crazy about this system but it works. A lot of group works and presentation. The standard is a little bit lower than in Sweden so its not really that hard to pass. Some professors are not that good in english but it works.

School

Very small school and all the classes are scheduled at the same time, which means everyone in school has break at the same time so it can get crowded and the lines to buy coffee can get really long. Otherwise nice rooms and a nice cafeteria where you can buy lunch and snacks.

Administration

The international office at PSB was really good and helped you with everything.
